

Papers sent by Dr. LaMont – Obviously these are loose pages that got torn from a larger tome, but I can't identify the volume. Latin. It might not be a known work? The diagrams clearly indicate a spell ("terrible cloud", "evasion (?) from enemies") but it will take weeks of study to learn the gestures and vocalize the words. See if any of my colleagues are interested.

Monocle – anonymous estate donation to MU – The lens looks similar those of the spectacles that I got from Bentz, years ago. Need to pull them out of storage and compare them to this one. Bentz's pair were discovered to be dangerous – too risky to look through without further analysis.

Stone with glyph – from UNH anthro. dept. – Glyph not any written language I can find. Could be imagining, but I get a strange feeling when holding it. Magical? I feel noticeably better after putting the thing down.

Object from Cairo dig site – I've come to call this object "The Lonely Thread" – It is active. At first the movements were erratic, as if an invisible force tugs upon it. But I started to notice a pattern of response. It responds to my voice somewhat. But is it the Thread that is responding? Or the force on "the other side"? Have I established some kind of communication? I have some more ideas that I can try tomorrow.

My colleagues should have returned to Arkham by now and gotten my message. Hopefully they'll arrive soon - I'm interested to find out more details about their encounter with that cult in Minnesota. I'll also have them take a look at these artifacts and know what to make of them, especially the Thread. Note - don't forget to retranscribe these entries into my main manuscript in the workshop.